

Notes on the contributors

Orna ALMOGI received her PhD in Tibetology from the Universität Hamburg (UHH) in 2006. From 1999 until 2004 she had been working for the Nepal-German Manuscript Preservation Project (NGMPP) and the Nepalese-German Manuscript Cataloguing Project (NGMCP), both at UHH, where she had been responsible for the Tibetan materials. From 2008 to 2011 she has been a member of the Researcher Group Manuscript Cultures in Asia and Africa, UHH. Currently she is a principal investigator in the Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures, UHH. Her research interests extend to a number of areas connected with the Tibetan religio-philosophical traditions and Tibetan Buddhist literature, particularly that of the rNying-ma school. The primary focus of her research the past years has been the concept of Buddhahood in traditional Buddhist sources, early subclassifications of Madhyamaka, the history of the transmission of the rNying ma rgyud 'bum, and the culture of the book in the Tibetan cultural sphere, specifically the compilation and transmission of large Buddhist literary collections.

Orna Almogi • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (SFB 950) •
Universität Hamburg • Warburgstr. 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany
Email: orna.almogi@uni-hamburg.de

Cathy CANTWELL has been a member of the Faculty of Oriental Studies, University of Oxford, since 2002. She received her PhD from the University of Kent at Canterbury in 1990. She is a specialist on Tibetan tantric traditions of all periods, with a special focus on ritual texts and practices deriving from the “Early Transmissions” (snga 'gyur rnying ma). Her work has ranged from studies of Dunhuang tantric manuals, critical editing of rNying ma'i rgyud 'bum texts, and the development of cycles of revelatory texts across generations in the modern period. Her major publications have included three books co-authored with Robert Mayer, the most recent of which is A Noble Noose of Methods, the Lotus Garland Synopsis: A Mahāyoga Tantra and its Commentary (2012, Vienna, The Austrian Academy of Sciences Press).

Cathy Cantwell • Oriental Institute • Pusey Lane • Oxford OX1 2LE • UK

E-mail: catherine.cantwell@orinst.ox.ac.uk

L. S. COUSINS (1942–2015) studied History and then Oriental Languages at Cambridge University. He spent most of his career at the University of Manchester, where he became a senior lecturer. After early retirement he moved to Oxford, where he became a member of common room (2001–2007) and a supernumerary fellow (2007–2009) at Wolfson College. He was made a member of the faculty of Theology at Oxford University, where he taught and lectured on Pāli and Buddhist Studies. He was at various times president of the UK Association of Buddhist Studies and of the Pali Text Society. He was a fellow of the Oxford Centre for Buddhist Studies. In 2013 he was awarded an honorary doctorate from Mahamakut University, Bangkok. He wrote extensively on Abhidhamma, Buddhist meditation, Pāli, Middle Indian and Buddhist Sanskrit textual studies, and the history of early Buddhist schools, particularly in the Southern Buddhist Tradition. For some of his published work, see <http://oxford.academia.edu/LSCousins>.

Martin DELHEY received his PhD in Indology at the University of Hamburg in 2002. At that time, he mainly focused his attention on Abhidharma and early Yogācāra Buddhism. Afterwards, he became an Assistant Professor at the University of Göttingen; followed by various research positions and a substitute professorship in Kyoto and Hamburg. At present, he is affiliated to a multi-disciplinary centre that is devoted to manuscriptological research. Other interests include problems of Buddhist ethics and tantric studies.

Martin Delhey • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (SFB 950) • Universität Hamburg • Warburgstr. 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany

E-mail: martin.delhey@uni-hamburg.de

Brandon DOTSON is Privatdozent at Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, where he currently directs the “Kingship and Religion in Tibet” research group. He received his doctorate from the University of Oxford in 2007. His work focuses on ritual and narrative in Tibet, with a special emphasis on the study of the oldest written Tibetan sources. His books and articles treat a range of topics from codicology, historiography, and divination to kingship, ritual, and memory.

Brandon Dotson • Institut für Indologie und Tibetologie • Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München • Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1 • 80539 München • Germany

E-mail: dotson.brandon@gmail.com

Oliver HAHN received his PhD in Chemistry in 1996. After a stint spent as a research associate in the Department for Restoration and Conservation of Books, Graphic Arts and Archival Materials at the University of Applied Sciences in Cologne, he now works for the German Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing in Berlin. His areas of special interest include the analysis and the preservation of the country’s cultural heritage. Hahn is head of the institute’s Division 4.5 “Analysis of Artefacts and Cultural Assets.” Since 2014 he is Professor at the University of Hamburg, Arts Faculty.

Oliver Hahn • Division 4.5 • BAM Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing • Unter den Eichen 44–46 • 12200 Berlin • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (SFB 950) • Universität Hamburg • Warburgstr. 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany

E-mail: oliver.hahn@bam.de

Oskar VON HINÜBER (born 1939) is professor emeritus for Indology of the Albert-Ludwigs-Universität, Freiburg. After high school he joined the navy and as a reservist holds the rank of a commander. After studying in Tübingen, Erlangen, Mainz he got his PhD in 1966 and passed his habilitation in 1973 at the university at Mainz. After acting as professor in Mainz (1974–1981) and rejecting the chair for Indian languages and Literatures at Oslo (1977), he took up the professorship for Indology at the Albert-Ludwigs-Universität, Freiburg (1981–2006). He is ordinary member of the Akademie der Wissenschaften und der Literatur, Mainz, associé étranger (Membre de l'Institut) of the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres, Paris, and corresponding member of the Österreichische Akademie der Wissenschaften, Vienna. He was and is member of the board (sometimes chair) of different organizations in the field of humanities and was visiting professor at the universities of Vienna (1984); Oxford (1995/6); Collège de France, Paris (1996); École Pratique des Hautes Études, Paris (2002); International College for Postgraduate Buddhist Studies/International Institute of Buddhist Studies, Tokyo (2008). Field research was conducted during numerous journeys (1967–2015) in India, and on manuscripts in Buddhist monasteries in Thailand or on Buddhist inscriptions in North Pakistan. His publications mainly on the linguistic history of Buddhism, epigraphy and cultural history include 25 books, among them: Arrian: Der Alexanderzug – Indische Geschichte. Griechisch und Deutsch (1985), Das ältere Mittelindisch im Überblick (2001), A Handbook of Pāli Literature (1996), Die Palola Śāhis (2004), Indiens Weg in die Moderne (2005), Kanaganahalli Inscriptions (2014). Part of his about 150 articles and more than 450 reviews are collected in Selected Papers (2005) and Kleine Schriften (2009).

Oskar von Hinüber • Kartäuserstr. 138 • 79102 Freiburg

Seong-Uk KIM is a Soon Young Kim Postdoctoral Fellow at the Korea Institute of Harvard University. He received his doctorate from the University of California, Los Angeles in 2013. His main research area is Chinese and Korean Chan/Sŏn and Huayan/Hwaŏm Buddhist traditions. Currently, he is working on a book manuscript that explores Korean Buddhism during the latter half of Chosŏn (1392–1910) in interaction with Confucianism. Recent publications include a study of the distinctive development of the mind-transmission theory in Korea in the Journal of American Oriental Society (2013).

Seong-Uk Kim • Korea Institute • Harvard University • CGIS South Building • 1730 Cambridge Street • Cambridge, MA 02138 • USA

E-mail: seongukkim@fas.harvard.edu

Emanuel KINDZORRA studied chemistry at the Technical University in Berlin and received his diploma in 2012. He now works for the German Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing in Berlin as a PhD student. His expertise includes the analysis of cultural heritage with Raman and Infrared spectroscopy. Currently he is working on a method validation of Diffuse Reflectance Infrared Fourier Transform Spectroscopy for cultural heritage.

Emanuel Kindzorra • Division 4.5 • BAM Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing • Unter den Eichen 44–46 • 12200 Berlin • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (SFB 950) • Universität Hamburg • Warburgstr. 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany
E-mail: emanuel.kindzorra@bam.de

Jowita KRAMER completed a doctorate (Hamburg, 2004) and habilitation (Munich, 2010) in Indology. The main focus of her research lies on Indian and Indo-Tibetan Buddhism (with particular emphasis on the philosophical concepts of the Yogācāra tradition) and on aspects of authorship, originality, and intertextuality in Buddhist commentarial literature. Her publications include a monograph on the Yogācāra concept of the “five categories” (vastu) and an edition of the Pañcaskandhakavibhāṣā, a 6th century commentary by the Indian scholar Sthiramati on Vasubandhu’s Pañcaskandhaka. She has held positions at the Universities of Oxford, Heidelberg and Göttingen in the past and is currently a research fellow at the University of Munich.

Jowita Kramer • University of Munich • Institute for Indology and Tibetology • Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1 • 80539 Munich • Germany
E-mail: jowita.kramer@lmu.de

Claire MACDONALD received her Bachelors of Science in Imaging Science from Rochester Institute of Technology and is pursuing a Master’s Degree in Remote Sensing through the Oceanography department at the University of Delaware. Her work is focused on recovering erased and damaged writing in manuscripts through multispectral imaging and further digital image processing, including work on censored manuscripts and palimpsests.

Claire MacDonald • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (SFB 950) • Universität Hamburg • Warburgstraße 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany

E-mail: claire.macdonald@uni-hamburg.de

Robert MAYER is University Research Lecturer at the University of Oxford, where he was appointed in 2002. He received his doctorate from Leiden University in 1996. His research focuses on indigenous Tibetan tantric traditions. Most of his work is done jointly with Dr. Cathy Cantwell. His current research topics include early Bon tantras, authorship within the gter-ma tradition, and the Padmasambhava narratives.

Robert Mayer • Oriental Institute • University of Oxford • Pusey Lane • Oxford OX1 2LE • UK

E-mail: robert.mayer@orinst.ox.ac.uk

Boryana POUVKOVA is a researcher at the Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures in Hamburg, Germany. The project she is involved in has the task to recover lost writing from damaged manuscripts using multispectral imaging. She is a doctoral candidate in Greek Philology at the University of Hamburg.

Boryana Pouvkova • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (SFB 950) • Universität Hamburg • Warburgstr. 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany

E-mail: boryana.pouvkova@uni-hamburg.de

Dr. Ira RABIN studied chemistry at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Between 1979 and 1983 she worked as a student and later as a staff member of the Conservation Department of the Jewish National and University Library (JNUL), with specialization paper and parchment conservation. In 1983 she returned to the Hebrew University of Jerusalem to continue her studies in physical chemistry. In 1987 she moved to Berlin, where she obtained a PhD degree in physical chemistry at the Max-Planck-Society in collaboration with the Free University. Until 2003 she worked in basic research in cluster physics in the Fritz-Haber-Institute of the Max-Planck-Society and continued her research on parchment but as a hobby. Since 2003 her main research interest is dedicated to the Dead Sea Scrolls. Between 2005 and 2007 she worked in Israel as a scientific advisor for the Israel Antiquities Authority and the Jewish National Library. From 2007 to 2010 she coordinated the international Qumran project. Currently, she is senior scientist at the Federal Institute of Material Research and Testing (BAM) in Berlin and the Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures (CSMC) in Hamburg, Germany.

Ira Rabin • Division 4.5 • BAM Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing • Unter den Eichen 44–46 • 12200 Berlin • Centre for the Study of Manuscript Cultures • University of Hamburg • Warburgstraße 26 • 20354 Hamburg • Germany

E-mail: ira.rabin@bam.de

Martin SEEGER is Associate Professor of Thai Studies at the University of Leeds, UK. He received his MA and doctorate from the University of Hamburg. From 1997 to 2000 he was ordained as a Theravada Buddhist monk in northern Thailand. He has done research on Thai Buddhism and environmentalism, Human Rights in Thai Theravada Buddhism and development monks in the north-eastern part of Thailand. He continues to work on the biographies of female practitioners and dhamma teachers in modern Thai Buddhism.

Martin Seeger • East Asian Studies • School of Languages, Cultures and Societies • University of Leeds • LS2 9JT • UK

E-mail: m.seeger@leeds.ac.uk

Marta SERNESI is Researcher and Lecturer at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität (Munich, Germany). Her main area of expertise is pre-modern Tibetan history, religion, and literature. She works primarily on historical, biographical, instructional, and poetical sources, with a focus on the issue of the formation, transmission, and representation of Buddhist traditions and lineages. Her recent publications are devoted to Tibetan book culture, investigating modes of textual production, the circulation of manuscripts and printed books, and early xylographic bookprinting in Tibet.

Marta Sernesi • Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München • Institut für Indologie und Tibetologie • Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1 • 80539 München • Germany

E-mail: marta.sernesi@lrz.uni-muenchen.de

Sarah SHAW read Greek and English at Manchester University, where she received her doctorate in English Literature in 1983. She moved to Oxford in 1995 and studied Pāli and Sanskrit at Oxford University. She is a member of Wolfson College, the Faculty of Oriental Studies, Oxford University and is a fellow of the Oxford Centre for Buddhist Studies. Her research interests include Buddhist meditation, Jātakas, literary aspects of early Buddhist texts, modern meditation theory and practice, and the art and chanting traditions of modern Southeast Asia. Published works include: Buddhist Meditation: an Anthology of Texts (2006), The Jātakas: Birth Stories of the Bodhisatta (2006), Introduction to Buddhist Meditation (2009), The Spirit of Buddhist Meditation (2014), and, with Dr. Naomi Appleton and Professor Toshiya Unebe, Illuminating the Life of the Buddha: a Chanting Manual from Eighteenth-Century Siam (2014). A translation of the Mahānipāta of the Jātakas, the last ten birth stories of the Bodhisatta, co-authored with Naomi Appleton, is to be published this year.

Sarah Shaw • Wolfson College • Oxford OX2 6UD • UK

E-mail: sarah.shaw@wolfson.ox.ac.uk

Jonathan A. SILK is, since 2007, Professor in the Study of Buddhism at Leiden University. His main research interests focus on Mahāyāna sūtra literature, upon which he has published extensively. His most recent book is Buddhist Cosmic Unity: An Edition, Translation and Study of the Anūnatvāpūrṇatvanirdeśaparivarta (Hamburg, 2015). He is editor of the Indo-Iranian Journal, and founding general editor of Brill's Encyclopedia of Buddhism.

Jonathan A. Silk • Leiden University Institute for Area Studies, LIAS • Matthias de Vrieshof 3, Room 0.05b • 2311 BZ Leiden • The Netherlands

E-mail: j.a.silk@hum.leidenuniv.nl

Péter-Dániel SZÁNTÓ (1980) initially studied Tibetan and Indology at ELTE Budapest. He received his DPhil from the University of Oxford (Balliol College, 2012), where he was also a Junior Research Fellow (Merton College). After a ten-month stipend at the University of Hamburg, he returned to Oxford in 2014 as a Post-doctoral Research Fellow at All Souls College. His research focuses mainly on mature esoteric Buddhism in India, its texts, its development and transmission, and its socio-historical background.

Péter-Dániel Szántó • All Souls College • Oxford OX1 4AL • UK
E-mail: peter.szanto@all-souls.ox.ac.uk